this afternoon was furnished by the present world's champions up to top-notch speed. It was decided to-day that the All-Stars and the Athletics Pansy Silver, with Nuckols, up, took the first two heats of the 2:17 trot from Hannah Louise by narrow margins. At the start of the third heat she broke badly, ran an eighth of a mile, and finished a poor fifth. The exertion of controlling his mare was too much for Nuckols, and he collapsed after passing the wire.

Nuckols, and he collapsed after passing the wire.

Hodson, who succeeded Nuckols in the fourth heat, held the Silver mare to the front to the stretch, only to have her go into the air again, wobble all poer the track, and finish last, Mc. winning in a game drive.

McJ. took the fifth with Pansy Silver up. All other starters were ruled off for the sixth and final round.

Pansy Silver lost her stride at once and was soon a dozen lengths behind. Hight there McMahon made the fatal mistake of easing up with McJ, for when Hodson brought his mare to her feet she settled down to work, caught the gelding at the head of the stretch, drove him into a break almost at the wire, and won by a nose.

Longworth B. was not driven out to win the 2:17 pace in straight heats.

In both heats of the 2:05 pace Hodson lay in behind the leader with Major Brino, but the stallion was best at the finish, and won out by close decisions.

Bijou—"The Soul Kias," matinee and night.

"Soul Kiss" Captures Audience.

Though "J. Lucifer Mephisto," the very Old Boy himself, is the star in "The Soul Kiss," the show is very good in every sense of the word, with but a dash of spice here and there. Deservedly a packed house at the Bijou demanded many encores last night, for the company is excellent, the muste and the singing are catchy, the large chorus is well trained, and the principal parts well played.

Thomas S. Van, as His Diabolical Majesty, was easily the star of the cast, versatile, realistic. His song. "Very Well, Then," brought him back until his lines were exhausted, and his monologue at the beginning of the second act was a touch of dramatic art not often seen in a light production. Harry Henshaw, as the American sport, scored a hit, especially in his college yell song. As Maurice, the young sculptor, George McGarry portrayed the part adequately. Jack Port, tas Sol Skevinsky, was fairly humorous. As Suzette, the model, Glenn Ellis was altogether fetching, in good voice, Gertrude Harris also song well, and led the chorus most effectively. Ethel Gilmore lent much to the performance by her dancing, which was along the Genee order.

by her dancing, which was along the Genee order.

In fact, the whole company is unusually good, not leaving out the chorus, which was nearly exhausted by the time it had concluded responding to the encores for the "musical girls" act, which seemed to please the house far more than the rather tame "soul kiss" itself.

There is nothing shop-worn or second-hand about "The Soul Kiss." It's lively, but it's good.

"The Clansman's" Last Visit.

The forthcoming revival of "The Clansman," which will be presented in this city on Thursday, matinee and night, at the Academy, is an event of some moment to local theatregoers, in that it will be their last opportunity to see Thomas Dixon's sensational dramatic success. A special revival was made this season for a tour of the South inasmuch as the play has not been seen in this section for three years. It is unlikely that the great drama will be presented again in this city.

Something extraordinarily good in the musical comedy style of theatrical entertainment is to be expected of "The Echo," the latest of Charles B. Dillingham's Globe Theatre, New York, musical successes, which is to be the attraction at the Academy on Fiday and Saturday and Saturday matinee.

"The Echo" enjoyed an all-summer's run at the Globe Theatre, and has many unique features to recommend it. It has been sent on the road by Messra. Weil and Pollock in strictly first-class order, and the original production used during the New York engagement will be presented here in its entirety, Blanche Deyo, who appears as Kate, the head waitress at the Echo Hotel, Investigate This One.
